Dear Potential Developer,

Thank you for your interest in Commodore Amiga development. Enclosed is the application for our Developer Support Programs. All forms must be completed and returned to Commodore. Developer support program fees may be paid by check or money order (USA dollars only - no foreign checks accepted). Checks must be drawn on a USA bank.

Since the launch of the Amiga in 1985, the market has grown dramatically. With over 1700 third party products now released, our end users have a wide spectrum of products available to them. They can select from a variety of paint and graphics packages, business applications, music editors and composition packages, word processors and recreational software.

However, there are still many marketing opportunities to be explored. Business graphics, CAD/CAM and CAE, desktop presentation, and educational software are just a few of the applications where development would be profitable.

Additionally, the Amiga is uniquely poised as an environment for entirely new micro computer applications. The Amiga has blazed new trails in overall price/performance, yet it's full capabilities remain far from realized. Developers who put their resources into the Amiga today have the opportunity to be the bold innovators of tomorrow.

The Developer Support Programs supply the developer with information to help in developing Amiga products. The Support Programs provide hardware discounts and technical support through a variety of systems including technical mailings and an online BBS. These programs are the means by which Commodore keeps you informed of the latest technical updates.

If you should have any questions regarding the application, please call (610) 431-9180.

We look forward to welcoming you to the Developer Support Programs.
